

The Helplines Partnership has been absolutely crucial to the NSPCC Helpline/Childline as an individual organisation. It's provided us with help, advice, assistance and critically information about the industry and where it is going for the future as well. But also it provides a valuable opportunity to bring helplines together because helplines working together means that we can provide a wider more exacting support services for a range of very vulnerable individuals in our society which means helplines become a key component to safe-guarding the well-being of individuals right across the UK.

John Cameron - Head of Child Protection Operations at NSPCC

Your organisation and membership have an incredible level of reach and potential to impact on the lives of many people in distress and in doing so helping to improve their mental health.

Isabella Goldie - Mental Health Foundation

The Helplines Partnership has been valuable to Breast Cancer Care for myself and the organisation who I have worked with for the last 9 years, through networking, support and through training.

Denise Delaney - Breast Cancer Care

I have found the support from Helplines Partnership incredibly valuable since I joined Nightline..and hope that this relationship continues well into the future.
